

Read more - a clean economy transition would supercharge Victorian manufacturing and avoid half a trillion of costs by 2030.

Carolyn Invarson explains why it is essential to come to Living in a Clean Economy in this new blog post on our upcoming Forum.

"Living in a Clean Economy will showcase both why it is essential to move rapidly to a clean energy economy, and what that might look like".

The benefits are compelling according to Tom Kompas' research in a recent high level business case for Victoria and Queensland. Three to one benefits over diverse sectors, lower cost capital and half a trillion in avoided costs by 2030. I mean we are talking big numbers here!
